
IN SOLIDARITY

A Message to the Marin Shakespeare Company Community:

Theatre is a means to share stories that entertain, enlighten, and expand us as human beings.

Our theatres are physically closed, but we must continue to tell stories of importance.

Today, we stand in solidarity with all our brothers and sisters. We stand up to add our voice to the calls for meaningful systematic change against institutionalized racism, economic suppression, and opportunity inequalities. We stand forward to add our voice to the call for true social justice. Our work with incarcerated people and returned citizens is central to our mission; we must and will continue to lift up the voices of the unheard so that they can share their stories.

The murders of George Floyd, Ahmaud Arbery, and Breonna Taylor — this week — and the murder and torture of millions of Americans on a daily basis in this country makes all of our lives unsafe, and makes all of our hearts unclean.

Below is a list of Resources for Accountability and Action for Black Lives from BlackLivesAction. We hope it will be inspiration to take action to help effect the change this country needs.

We stand in solidarity today. We yearn to stand in equality tomorrow.
